Agreed.

My real point is that we should be very aware of the distinctions.

If we cannot do so internally, it will be difficult to defend the distinctions externally even though they are real.

Correct...at this stage, the Respondent to the FEC complaint is the superpac. Navatek is not a Respondent. The potential Respondent is the LLC. I'm pretty sure that, at some point, the FEC lawyers are going to seek to figure out who the LLC is and who is behind it. I think that, while Cleta's guidance as to the acceptance of the LLC contribution (without seeking to know more about the origin of the LLC) was not venal, it was her decision that even a minimal effort of due diligence wasn't required. My advice to my superpac clients, who are faced with a contribution from an unknown LLC, is always to put that contribution into a separate account and perform some minimal level of due diligence on the LLC from the get-go. Bill.

Unless there have been some other disclosures that I wasn't aware of, at this point "Navatek" is not definitively involved in this matter nor is anyone's client. Navatek's association to this matter is completely speculative. The parties of primary relevance right now are 1820 and SYWSE with respect to interaction with any third parties. No one should be assuming at this stage that Navatek is a client.

Or am I misunderstanding something here?

Agree. The thing we need to clarify is that Navatek has its own counsel. She may be assuming that the answer is on behalf of both.

I think that Cleta's desire to inform the FEC, in the superpac's response to the complaint, about the LLC's scholarship program is both ill advised and counter-intuitive. The superpac's response should, in essence be, we got an LLC check, we deposited it and duly reported it on our year end 2019 FEC report, end of story. Her position should be that the superpac accepted a legitimate contribution. She shouldn't provide her opinion on the eliomosinary activities of the LLC, of which she has no first hand knowledge. When the time comes, the LLC can explain its scholarship program...we don't need Cleta doing that for us. Bill.

Hi Andy:

I'm on a plane now. Yes, please forward to Bill. Yes, we have already started to process of issuing scholarships and have been in touch with all of the universities we are working with. Duke can send you the specific list. Working with Universities in setting up scholarships is a time consuming process. They are after all an university and move at a glacial pace. We are doing and moving as fast as we can.

Good afternoon!

I'm going to be preparing the response to the FEC complaint in the next week – and I wonder if it is possible for any scholarships to be awarded or other activities taken by the LLC that gave the contribution to 1820 PAC? I would like to be able to point to something that is either public – or perhaps a letter that you could send to me, and which I could attach to the response. Think about that and let's work on how we can make sure to include other activities of the LLC as part of my response to the Commission. That would help both of us, I think.

Let me know and let's talk about that next week. Have a good weekend. Martin, I hope your son is recovering well from his surgery.

Thank you, everyone! Cleta

I want to be sure that the LLC proceeds with the ideas we discussed – giving scholarships and recognition to women in engineering, etc. – as that is going to be an issue at some point, so we should make sure to take necessary steps to protect the entity and YOU now while we have the time to do that. We should develop a plan and timetable, so there are some scholarships given over the next several months, and particularly, perhaps in Maine, where the bad press was.

Does that make sense?
